Photography Workshop – Acadia National Park

Join Kevin VanBuren in the field photographing intimate and large landscapes. This workshop is for beginner to advanced amateur.

Kevin VanBuren a working photographer leads this program with over 20 years experience as a photographer and master educator taking the time to present detailed knowledge concerning all the issues experienced relating to photography. This workshop allows attendees to experiment with exposure, composition as well a number of other useful tips.

You will experience all that nature has to provide and will work from dawn to dusk every day. We will rise for early morning photo shoots along coastal ocean vistas to the details of many fishing villages to the intimate landscapes provided by the craggy scenic inlets. This is a full workshop at it's best with short days, abundant photographic opportunities and great food of from down east Maine. Our mornings and afternoons will be spent out photographing all the scenic beauty. Our mid day and evenings will be spent reviewing our images of the day as well talking about our experiences. I have found I have learned a tremendous amount on workshops of this length over the years, with the sharing of ideas from everyone in attendance.

Who Should Attend – This program is intended for the beginner thru advanced amateur photographer.

Equipment – All participants are encouraged to bring digital camera of any variety. Wear comfortable clothing including layering for comfort, as early mornings tend to be cool. A sturdy tripod is also recommended for those wishing to do macro work and low light long exposures. Sturdy shoes and rain gear.

Accommodations: A group of rooms will be rented allowing individuals privacy for the evening and early morning prep.

Registration – Please contact the gallery to be included in the upcoming workshop scheduled for October 10th thru 16th 2010. No refunds are given to those that cancel within 30 days of a workshop. A credit will be applied to you next workshop scheduled.

Fees: $875.00 (US)
